East Coast, Italy

The east coast of Italy is lined with white sand beaches and blue-green seas. At times we felt as if we were in Waikiki or Ala Moana Beach. The beaches are completely covered with beach umbrellas and chairs for rent. Only a small segment of beach is “free”. Amazingly, most umbrellas/chairs are occupied. We stayed in the towns of Pescara and Bari. Of the two, Bari is our favorite and definitely on our list of “return to see again” places. Here are a few scenes from our east coast journey. - Cheryl and Wayne

Wayne takes an evening swim in the Adriatic Sea in Pescara.

A scene of the countryside driving south from Pescara to Bari.

A charming seaside town in the Palese district of Bari.

Boats in the bay in the Bari-Palese area.

Wayne is in his element as we watch sailboats in a Bari harbor.

More boats in Bari. Wayne was a side-line coach as he watched some children taking a sailing lesson.
