

Sagres

We left Lisbon and drove south to the Algarve region.

We arrived in the town of Sagres. This is a view from a window in our pousada.

Here I stand in front of our pousada "Infante de Sagres".

Across the bay stands Fortaleeza, an old fort that once housed a naval academy for Henry the Navigator.

From this most southwestern point set sail numerous sailors in years past.

A closer view of Fortaleeza.

Sagres

Standing in the windy entry gate to Fortaleza De Sagres.

Several gorgeous bays line the southern coastline far below the cliffs.

Wayne stands next to an old cannon that once guarded the fort.

One of the shops in Sagres that sell local pottery..

A photo of colorful fishing boats in a Sagres harbor.

Sunbathers fill a beach in Lagos, Algarve.